Week trips, E. Oregon, $20.00

If you have your own boats and equipment, fees will be 50¢ and $5.00

Because of this being the first attempt at this kind of outing for the Obsidians, the above may be subject to change.

Committee members are:

VICTORY FOR ENVIRONMENTALISTS

House Bill #1036 passed the House on Friday, April 9 by a large majority, partly due to the hard work of a few persons against the concerted efforts of the glass bottling, aluminum and beer industries.

If it passes the Senate, Oregon can be proud to be the first state to have control of throw-away containers, as this bill places a 5¢ deposit on pop and beer bottles and cans, and outlaws the flip-top cans.

Obsidians who have carried out many bags and pounds of such trash may see the day when cans and bottles are not found in parking and picturesque and picnicing spots.

HELP get this legislation through the Senate by writing to:

Senator Ed Fadeley

Capitol Building

Salem, Oregon

Also write to George Lingard and Betty Browns, urging their support of the measure without amendment.

Do so immediately!

DELP CREEK March 7

Where the plowing ceased on the Delp Creek Road, we donned our snowshoes and continued in foot deep snow all the way to Delp Rock, experiencing rain, sleet, light and heavy snow, plus intermittent clearing with a feeble attempt from the sun. On the return trip we short-cut across snow covered, logged over areas to eliminate switchbacks on the road.

The snow depth was from two to three feet, but the surface was good for snowshoeing. Tink Gent did very well for her first experience on snowshoes, considering we traveled nearly six miles.

We were all glad to return to the car. Besides Tink, Mary Bridgeman, Don Payne, Helen Smith, and leader Lois Schreiner enjoyed the outing.

*****

THE BRIDGEMANS generously donated a large pyrex teapot for use at potlucks, and THE MEDILLS donated a large china teapot.

"Thank you, folks, for your gifts."

REX STEVENS was given a write-up in the Reminder on his membership in the Eugene Mountain Rescue team recently.

OLD BALDY AND COBURG CAVES March 14

Weather included sleet, snow, rain sun and wind. The trails - er - the swamps, were swampy all the way. We were generally under some kind of cover as each squall blew in on us. We had a nice fire going at the Coburg Caves as the last heavy wind and rain storm came in, and we broke out two packages of weiners for the group, which we roasted over the fire with apple sticks which we cut a few minutes before arriving. We hurdled numerous freshets, and picked ourselves some miseltoe from the oak trees on our way back. The plucky pluckers were:

Don Payne            Parker Riddle
Susan and            Helen Smith
Alan Payne           Tom Thompson and Bob Cox, leader.

CAPE PERPETUA March 21

This was a perfect day - not too hot nor too cold, and an intermittent soft breeze and good visibility. Lunch was enjoyed on the dry grass above the tide pools, at which time we celebrated Henry Oswald's birthday, complete with cake and song. On leaving the Cape, we were mindful of the "forces of nature"- often peaceful, occassionally violent but with that warm feeling that "It's good to live in Oregon". The leader thanks all the following for their contributions for making this a delightful trip: Hazen & Lorene Bressler, David Cohen, Mary Couch, Duchess Cox, Susan Christy, Ernest Patti Amy Valerie and Nick Drapela, Shoichi Fujita, Margaret Hess, Henry Jeppeson, Dottie Krizo, John Krizo, John Dorothy and Ronnie Leland, Dina, Wendy Eric and Sara Michener, Henry and Gertrude Oswald, Ben Ross, Tom Thompson, Margaret Wilson and Neal and Nina Kalez. - Mary Carr, leader

FAWN LAKE - RED TOP March 27,28

We didn't pick the best weekend for winter camping, yet it was a great improvement over our January trip when we nearly drowned in the rain. This time it was a cool, blustery day with 8" of new snow. Trail blazes were well buried so the last 3/4 mile was cross country.

Arrived at Fawn Lake late afternoon. The temperature was falling and it was snowing. We anticipated a stormy night.

The weather really moderated, so we went part way up Red Top on Sunday.

- next column

The snow was soft, and considering many other factors, it was not prudent to go gung-ho for the top, so we kept the trip in the outing category and not an expedition. Clouds kept the mountains well obscured until we were leaving Fawn Lake. The more youthful members did some downhill skiing at the original Willamette ski area located along the trail. This slope has long been abandoned for the site on the highway.

I am enthusiastic about Fawn Lake area- a beautiful corner of the Diamond Peak Wilderness; little used but provides a lot of recreational opportunities - especially good for winter overnights because of the good access.

On the trip were Mary Bridgeman, Chris Jones, Steve Leipe, Bill Ross and - Marriner Orum, leader.

BUCK MOUNTAIN (Coburg Hills) Jan.24

This was a trip where forested trails, blocks of clear-cut land, and good views are near at hand. The first part of the drive up McGowan Creek Road offered several good views. We got out of the cars once to stretch, and take in a beautiful and breath-taking view of the Willamette Valley. We turned off to the quarry where we left the cars and proceeded by trail about a mile and a quarter to the top of the mountain.

Mist settled in, obscuring the view, but we enjoyed seeing the many rivulets from snow runoff, icy-coated trees and bushes, and snow on the ground for games, sliding and walking. The top of the mountain with its ice-coated relay tower was pretty windy, so we scurried to a lower protected spot - next page please

- for a small fire and lunch. Then after some frolicking in the snow, a walk back in the chilling drizzle, and home. It was a good group and a good trip, in spite of the rain. On the trip were: Kathy Brown, Bill and Linda Cooper, Laura and Steve Cooper, Tink Gent, Roger Long, Larry Mooney and sons Tom, Dave, Mike and John, and leader Louise Berkey.

WILLAMETTE RIVER TRIP April 4

(Dexter to Springfield's Island Park)

After pulling into the current we noticed one car with lights on, so landed downstream and owner went back to turn them off. Down river another half mile a boat developed oar trouble, necessitating a stop for repairs. Another mile downstream one boat took wrong channel, so occupants got out and towed boat back upstream. Water was exceptionally cold.

Next obstacle was a herd of seven deer standing on a gravel bar looking us over.

Person in lead, instead of keeping still and using his camera, yelled at the top of his voice to call attention to this unusual sight, at which time all deer took off for more private areas.

Water was fairly fast all the way. Leader took outboard motor to pull boats thru any still water, but used it only twice on short stretches. One boat got a six inch cut in the bottom, and all stopped for repairs and lunch. Several white faces looked us over, here and there, as did some people. The river divides into several channels at various times, and it took some guesswork as to which to take, but everything turned out well. On this first venture were: *Anne Cully, *Conny Myers, *Randy Myers, Nell Harmon, Dorothy Medill, Mary Bridgeman, Mary Carr, Ass't Harvey Harmon and the leader Bob Medill.

HISTORY OF THE OBSIDIANS No. 83 by Ray Sims

On October 5, 1960 Bob Medill and I made a short trip down Obsidian Trail from Frog Camp to retrieve the large three foot sign "The Obsidian Trail" entering the Three Sisters Wilderness.

Between Dec. 20 and 24, 1960 the skylights of our new lodge were installed and by the 24th, heavy paper and steel wire was covering the main room. By the 27th the entire room was covered with cement, with bright sunlight shining thru the open sides. The ditch was still being completed for the water line, with the road so muddy that most cars were left outside. During the latter part of December the cedar siding was placed.

One of my pictures shows Margaret Wiese high on a ladder putting on stain.

The first plumbing was put in during early January, 1961, and the foundation for the fireplace was laid January 28.

A New Year's Day trip down to the coast was taken by the Obsidians to the north jetty. A picture of Jo Ann Wesley and Charla Eubanks near the splashing sea and beautiful blue sky was taken.
